DEFINITIONS: Provided per CH-01.

ORGANIZATION: The Alchemy AOE Community originated in part from interest surrounding custom random map scripts. Microsoft owns any custom random map scripts played in the game – but none of the tools that compile or analyze them, nor the specifications that describe them. There are three locations where such content is stored:

i) Anyone, regardless of clan affiliation, may share their random map scripts, as well as any files used to create them, in the following Github respository: Community Random Maps. Organized by event, author, etc., these resources are intended for collaboration and ease of access/publication. A webhook notifies all server users when a map in this repository is uploaded or modified.

ii) A Github repository where Members perform research on, and draft specifications defining, random maps. Also contained are computer programs useful for inspecting random maps against those specifications: Alchemy_Map_Specifications. Viewership is open, but only Alchemy Members may commit such files.

iii) A private Github repository where Random Map Scripting tools are shared. These tools are owned by the Alchemy AOE Community and are useful for creating advanced custom random map scripts. Read/write access is granted only to those bearing the {Cartographer} role.

CARTOGRAPHER ROLE: The {Cartographer} role is available to any Member who wishes to coordinate with Alchemy in leading the AOE2 map-making scene.

The benefits of having the {Cartographer} role are:
- {Cartographers}s receive priority map-testing for any creations shared in ORGANIZATION, Section i).
- {Cartographers}s gain access to the map-making tools described in ORGANIZATION, Section iii).
- {Cartographers}s are often invited by Alchemy leadership to script maps for guild-organized events.

Members with the {Cartographer} role are expected to:
- Maintain and occasionally add to their own sub-folder per ORGANIZATION, Section i), so that the rest of the guild may enjoy their creativity. {Cartographer}s may take a break from scripting for as long as they need.
- Protect the trade-secrets of the computer programs described in ORGANIZATION, Section iii). These tools were developed at great personal expense of other Members, and should not be shared with the outside world.
- Demonstrate a spirit of cooperation to help other {Cartographers}s be successful.
